

Whodunit!

You've received the confirmation.

Your bags are packed.

An evening of killer entertainment awaits.

But wait... to get away with murder takes planning. We asked our company director, Lawrence Brown, to address some popular pointers for those detectives who are new to the force!

What's the theme?

An important part of any whodunit is the setting, theme, and style. All Monepyenny Murder Mystery Productions embrace the idea of being immersed in the action and we encourage our investigating officers (you: the audience) to look the part too. Sometimes this means dressing to suit a historical period such as the 1920s. But often we have seen our amateur sleuths come dressed to reflect other murderous links; colours of a Cluedo board, effigies of death, famous detectives (even Scooby Doo!). The question is "Who will you be tonight?"

It's an affair! A social affair.

Holmes had Watson. Batman had Robin. Who are you bringing to help you tighten the handcuffs and read someone their rights? A Moneypenny Murder Mystery Production encourages teams of detectives to solve the deadly crime of murder. We often see teams that have a variety of ages, backgrounds, and knowledge do the best. Before you arrive consider bringing some friends to increase your chances of either catching a killer or commiserating the foul fiend got away with it!

Talk the talk

To crack any crime you'll need to use all the investigative skills at your disposal. This includes interrogating the suspects to solve the mystery and catch the killer. Who? How? Why? Where and When? These simple five words could mean the difference between being promoted to Detective Inspector or finding yourself demoted to traffic cop! Don't be afraid to get involved and go beyond the pleasantries... this is Murder after all! If ever there was a time to bring up someone's financial problems, discuss an affair or accuse a stranger of a crime this is it!

Remember your camera

...or your phone! And don't be afraid to use it. You're doing something very few have ever done but many have wanted to: Catch a killer! Arrival at the country house hotel venue (#SOC), pre-dinner drinks (#thegameisafoot), quality cuisine (#MurderontheMenu)... the list of memory making pictures goes on. And don't forget, you'll have dressed to match the theme in a costume you'll want your friends to see right? Don't forget to post your pictures online after the event and include the hashtag #MurderMystery so we can see what antics you've been up to.

Have fun

Murder Mystery events are huge fun! Interactive, entertaining, and best enjoyed with a curious mind. There will often be an element of competition as teams of detectives try to crack the case first. You'll enjoy the mystery most when you're ready to embrace the unexpected and immerse yourself in an evening of suspense, spectacle... and just a little silliness too.
